

Plenary Speakers

Nathan Stinson, Jr., Ph.D., M.D., M.P.H., served as the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Minority Health and the Director of the Office of Minority Health from August 1999 until his retirement in the Fall of 2004. Under Dr. Stinson's leadership, the Office of Minority Health developed and coordinated Federal health policy addressing minority health concerns and ensuring that Federal, State and local health programs take into account the needs of disadvantaged, racial and ethnic populations.

Dr. Stinson received his bachelor's degree from the University of Colorado, a master's degree from the University of California, and a Doctoral degree from the University of Colorado -- all in Environmental Biology. He obtained a M.D. degree from the University of Colorado Medical School and an M.P.H. in Health Care Administration from the Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences. His decorations include the Outstanding Service Medal, the Surgeon General's Exemplary Service Medal and the Crisis Response Service Award.

Franklin D. Gilliam Jr. is Professor of Political Science/Policy Studies and founding director of UCLA's Center for Communications and Community. He has recently accepted the post of Associate Vice Chancellor for Community Partnerships at UCLA, a newly-created position within the office of the Executive Vice Chancellor. He has been collaborating with Susan Bales on the development of strategic frame analysis for more than a decade and is a major contributor to FrameWorks' research in the area of media effects testing. Dr. Gilliam received his B.A. from Drake University and his Ph.D. from University of Iowa.

He is the author of The Farther to Go: Reading and Cases in African-American Politics and has also published in the American Political Science Review, American Journal of Political Science, Social Policy Report, Urban Affairs Review, Journal of Politics, Nieman Reports, Harvard International Journal of Press/Politics, Political Research Quarterly, Social Science Quarterly, Public Opinion, Legislative Studies Quarterly, Government and Policy, Sociological Inquiry, Public Opinion Quarterly, Political Psychology, Ethiopian Review and The Source.

Donald Warne, M.D., M.P.H. is an enrolled member of the Oglala Lakota (Sioux) Tribe from Pine Ridge, SD. He received his bachelor's degree from Arizona State University, M.D. from Stanford University and his Master of Public Health from Harvard University. Following residency in family medicine from Good Samaritan Regional Medical Center, he completed fellowships in Alternative Medicine from the Arizona Centers for Health and Medicine and in Minority Health Policy from Harvard Medical School. Dr. Warne is a Diplomate of both the American Board of Family Practice and the American Board of Medical Acupuncture, and he is a Certified Diabetes Educator (CDE).

Kelly Hsu, M.D.

Dr. Kelly Hsu has training in both Eastern and Western medicine with her current practice focusing on medical acupuncture. She received her undergraduate degree from The Johns Hopkins University and her medical degrees from the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine. Appointed to the Arizona Acupuncture Board of Examiners by Arizona's former Governor Jane D. Hull, Hsu has been instrumental in setting the rules and regulating the practice of acupuncture. As a community servant, she devotes her time to the Asian community, spearheading a number of programs that focus on enhancing the general health and well-being of the community. Hsu was selected as a fellow to the National Asian Women's Health Organization.

Plenary Speakers

Irma Bustamante

Irma Bustamante manages Language and Cultural Services at Phoenix Children's Hospital. She has done research and outreach on "medical access barriers for children in the Hispanic community". For over ten years, she has been a trainer for the Spanish Bilingual Interpreter Program. As part of her outreach work at PCH, she is currently a facilitator for the "Strengthening Multiethnic Families" parenting program. Irma is a bilingual, bicultural third generation Mexican-American, born and raised in the border town of Douglas, Arizona. Her education includes a BA in Political Science-Latin American Studies from ASU. As a Rotary Scholar, she studied at the Universidad Ibero-Americana in Mexico City. As a Ford Fellow, she did postgraduate work at Georgetown Latin American Comparative Government. She also attended University of Arizona College of Medicine.